Police Guard N. J. Refugee School

Fifty-five refugee students at a Hebrew rabbinical seminary near Somerville, N. J., have been subjected to much harassment by local youths in the last three months that State Police have established special patrols in the vicinity of the school, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

Rabbi Max Lousar, of 208 Fifty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, an instructor at the school, complained that at various times anti-Semitic remarks have been shouted at the students as they have walked the roads, firecrackers have been exploded during religious services, and on one occasion some boys pulled the beard of the dean of the school, Rabbi Solomon Unger.

Townspeople and officials look upon the incidents as unfortunate, but emphatically deny that racial prejudice is involved. State Police under Sergeant Arthur Bencer, of the Somerville barracks, report that there is no evidence that the assaults are organized.

Four boys of teen-age, two from Somerville and two from near-by Raritan, were apprehended after the license number of their jeep was reported to police after one incident. Officials of the school refused to press charges, but Sergeant Bencer said that the boys had been warned not to repeat the offense.

The school, which is called Yeshiva of Nitra, is on an eleven-acre farm five miles from Somerville on the South Branch Road. It is sponsored by the Mefista Talmudical Seminary, of 141 South Third Street, Brooklyn, and was named for a similar school at Nitra, Czechoslovakia, that was destroyed by the Nazis during World War II.

Many of the students, [illegible] during the war, and still bear numbers tattooed into their arms by the Germans.

Jewish Bodies Denounce British

Great Britain's seizure of the ship Exodus 1947 off Palestine last Friday was denounced by two leading American Jewish organizations.

Equally strong protests were voiced over Britain's action in sending the 4,500 unauthorized Jewish immigrants who had been aboard the vessel back to the port in France from which they had sailed.

In statements issued in New York, the American Jewish Conference and the American Zionist Emergency Council announced their stand. The former added that it had sent telegrams to President Truman and Secretary of State George C. Marshall asking an official United States protest to Britain.

The Secretary of State was urged to take four steps immediately in the wire dispatched to him by the conference.

"The United States Government should not remain silent in the face of events which undermine the principles of international law and which can only intensify the present strife and tension in Palestine caused by Britain's breach of its obligations under the Palestine mandate to which the United States Government is also a party," the telegram said.

Mr. Marshall was called upon "to investigate the events referred to (seizure of the Exodus and transshipment of the refugees aboard); to lodge a protest with the British Government over its action interfering with freedom of the seas; to demand that the British Government cease its illegal blockade of the Jewish National Home; and to secure guarantees that similar violations of interna-

agency spoke for "the overwhelming majority of the Jews in the United States."

GROUPS MUST BE 75 PER CENT NON-JEWS

Australia signed an agreement at Geneva with the International Refugee Organization covering the immigration to Australia of 4,000 displaced persons during the rest of 1947. The agreement provides for the immigration of about 1,000 monthly thereafter.

The IRO Preparatory Commission at Lausanne said legal and other protection of the immigrants after their arrival would be assured by IRO.

A new feature of the Australian agreement permits dependents of immigrants to follow them to Australia within three months. The agreement applies only to displaced persons in Europe.

The agreement bars discrimination in the selection of immigrants by race or religion. There was no indication, however, of a change in the previously announced Australian policy that all groups of immigrants must be at least 75 per cent non-Jews.

Honor Memory Of Haganah Ship Mate

Prominent Zionist leaders, speaking to a crowd estimated by the police at [illegible] persons at a protest [illegible] rally in memory of William Bernstein, first mate of the Haganah ship, Exodus 1947, who died of injuries in the fight between the British boarding party and refugees and the ship's crew. Two refugees were killed during that fight.

The high platform, facing Twenty-fourth Street and Madison Avenue, was draped with pictures of the first mate with captions that read: "Fought for his country, died for his people," and "American Haganah Hero—killed at hands of British." Several hundred persons stood behind wooden barricades, facing the platform, and held aloft placards denouncing the British Government.

Rabbi Silver thanked the French Government for its benevolent treatment of Jewish refugees and requested the crowd to stand at attention and sing the French National Anthem.

The speakers were headed by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, chairman of the American Zionist Emergency Council, which sponsored the rally; Dr. Emanuel Neumann, president of the Zionist Organization of America, and Representative Emanuel Celler of New York.

A force of 100 uniformed policemen and thirty detectives were on duty. The police shut off traffic between Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth Streets on Madison Avenue to enable the overflow crowd to fill the avenue. Loudspeakers carried the addresses to the crowds in the park.

The meeting served also as a memorial to William Bernstein, first mate of the Haganah ship, Exodus 1947, who died of injuries in the fight between the British boarding party and refugees and the ship's crew. Two refugees were killed during that fight.

Refugees Swarm Into Vienna

The Austrian Minister of the Interior sent a representative to the International Refugee Organization's meeting in Lausanne to report the increasingly alarming refugee and displaced-person situation in the country.

A major migration of Germans from Yugoslavia is pouring over the southeastern frontier and there is no means of caring for them. In Vienna within the last three weeks 1,000 refugee Jews from Rumania have been arriving weekly. There are now 5,400 in quarters with accommodations for only 1,500 to 1,600.

The Rothschild Hospital has become a bedlam, with the Joint Distribution Committee struggling to care for 2,000 destitute Jews although there are only 600 beds. Almost 1,000 refugees in the building are sleeping on the stone floors

Books In English To Record "Horrorism"

New documentary revelations of Nazi horrors against Jews and of Jewish heroism in Poland from 1939 to 1945 will appear in a series of books and pamphlets to be issued in English by the American Federation for Polish Jews in cooperation with the Jewish Historical Commission of Poland. At the four-day Inter-American Conference of the World Federation for Polish Jews in the Park Central Hotel, in New York, delegates voted a $100,000 appropriation for the immediate creation of an Institute of Publications.

Commenting on the resolution for the appropriation, Dr. Joseph Tenenbaum, president of both the World Federation and of the American Federations for Polish Jews, declared: "The world has not heard the end of the atrocities which already have challenged the most fantastic imagination. When all the documents now in possession of the Jewish Historical Commission of Poland are printed the world will gasp and condemn Nazi terrorism and persecution anew and will again prove that the Nuremberg fate of the Nazi leaders was a lullaby by comparison."

Reading to the convention new and hitherto unpublished examples of what he called "the horrorism of the Nazis and the heroism of the Jews" in Poland he added: "Yet we have heard here in the United States echoes of sympathy from a high political source for the Goerings and Streichers of yesterday."

"The whole story of Polish-Jewish heroism must be told. It has been written with [illegible] as that future generations will not have reason to say that the charges against the Nazis have been in any way exaggerated. It is furthermore our duty as Jews to hand the future an accurate story of the most horrible story ever told."

"We must not expect DP's to be admitted into United States or any other country, except Palestine, for humanitarian reasons," Ilja Dijour, director of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society in the occupied zones of Germany and Austria from October 1945 to January 1947, told delegates. "The war and its aftermath should have made us too realistic for that," he said. "We must strive instead for a qualitative development of the DP's in Europe and for a substantial program of vocational and cultural instruction, at the same time promoting employment for them on arrival. What is expected of us is Einsteins and more Einsteins."

Dijour told of the peculiar difficulties which engaged his attention in endeavoring to rescue many of those seeking to emigrate from Germany and Austria. Some cities, he said, and even some streets are divided among the French, American, British and Russian zones and thus create dilemmas for those residents seeking to emigrate to the United States. Berlin and Vienna are thus divided, and it is difficult, he said, to make it clear to the DP's that residence in one of the other than American zones disqualifies immigration to the United States. In many cases, he said, the residents of other zones in the same city are permitted to obtain American visas but such permission is not possible over larger areas. This condition has led the DP's to a misunderstanding of the general plan upon which immigration systems operate and charge their whole problem to bureaucracy.

Dijour pointed out the need of a two-point program for the rescue, or immigration of DP's or refugees:

1. Give all possible aid and encouragement to the Stratton bill which seeks to admit to the U. S. 100,000 refugees a year for the next four years. He said the movement for the Stratton bill has been gaining ground and should be stimulated as much as possible. The program is stimulated, he said, by such negative arguments as the fact that, after all, the Jews represent only 20 per cent of the DP and refugee problem, and that the majority want to go to Palestine anyway.

2. Development of a quantitative

Sees U. S. Drift Against Zionists

Dr. Emanuel Neumann, newly elected president of the Zionist Organization of America, deplored the failure of the United States Government to make its position on the Palestine question clear through the councils of the United Nations. He asserted that the Government's silence was "in effect throwing the game to the adversaries."

In an interview at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, with the New York Times, his first since election, he said that this silence has "encouraged a drift to an anti-Zionist solution."

Declaring that American policy has favored the cause of Zionism, Dr. Neumann called upon Secretary of State George C. Marshall and President Truman "not only to reaffirm American policy but to give a vigorous lead in the United Nations to promote a solution in harmony with avowed American policy as it has done in many other international questions."

In a statement prior to the interview, Dr. Neumann, referred to the Haganah ship, Exodus 1947, and the incidents connected with it, and charged the British Government with a "calculated piece of cruelty which has further infuriated the Jews of Palestine, increasing the tension in that country to the boiling point."

"For many months the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the whole Zionist movement have been en-

To The Unknown Six Million

By David Shrand

Ten years ago, you, who to-day lie buried in unmarked and unconsecrated graves, lived, pulsating with energy and vitality. Before you were able to assess the awful disaster that befell you, you were annihilated. In your last moments of anguish you were not even conceded the elementary right to make your peace with your Creator or to theorize on the philosophic implications of eternity. You were thrust into the arms of death while still in your normal senses, with the carefree laughter of the previous uneventful day still echoing in your ears.

Overnight your one-time friends proclaimed themselves demi-gods and, bent on your destruction, swept you into gas-chambers, ravaged and destroyed your loved ones in your presence. It was all like a frightening nightmare, but the pitiful cries of those being consumed by the flames in the blast-furnaces reaffirmed the stark reality of it. You in your weakness and your distress went through it all, step by step, day by day, hour by hour, minute by minute until you yourselves were crushed and smashed on the anvil of death.

That was ten years ago.

To you the story is forgotten. Those soul-searing scenes will not be reenacted again. The hysterical and blood-curdling screams that cleaved the air will not again assail your ears. The measured and muffled goose-stepping of German soldiers no longer strikes terror into your hearts; nor does the tell-tale knock on the door presage the arrival of the Gestapo; nor does the loathsome swastika, painted on your walls, augur brutal violence; nor does the insecurity of your life and that of your family create in you brooding fear and sleepless nights of contemplation.

It was not necessary to read your inmost thoughts while you were in the throes of this holocaust. The bloodshot eyes, deep-set in their sockets, the drooping shoulders, the furrowed lines on your forehead expressed in tragic and pathetic terms the disaster that hung over you.

This, and more than this, you suffered only ten years ago. Now you sleep undisturbed in the deep vaults of the earth, unmindful of the havoc wrought upon you and your kinsmen.

There were six million of you once who walked on the face of the European Continent. Some of you had achieved eminence in the field of literature; some of you had won distinction in the sphere of science. There were many of you who had distinguished yourselves in the service of your country on the battlefields. For generations you had lived in the country of your adoption and entrenched yourself there. Your whole psychology and way of living had been adjusted to your environment. In outlook and preferences you were of a piece with your neighbours.

And then in one fell swoop you were singled out for extermination. The rumblings of the Nazi doctrines broke out into a murderous thunder which reverberated throughout the four corners of the world. Immediately and decisively each one of you knew of your fate. The decades of liberalism that had freed you from the Ghetto had ended. Once again you were wanderers on the face of the earth.

It all came upon you so suddenly that in desperation you gathered your belongings and your dear ones and fled into the night. But the night was not dark enough to hide you from the prowling Gestapo, from the searching eyes of the Nazis. You hid by day and slunk like hunted animals into the forest by night. There was not only you alone but whole families in flight, babies in arms, young boys and girls all stricken with fear and shivering in the cold night. There were thousands of you, stumbling into the forest, panting and sobbing as you fled from death in search of refuge, safety and security. You were lost in the forests but their stillness and vastness gave you temporary relief. Your instinct told you that the trees provided temporary shelter and acted as a curtain that hid you from the Nazi spies.

You who had been accustomed to the niceties of refined living now found yourselves in the forests and the mountains. You had seen mountains and forests from afar but it had never occurred to you that one day you would be thrown into such close contact with them. You who were before self-possessed and imbued with high ideals now lay prostrate, degraded, confused and distressed, your energies dissipated in anxiety and fear.

How long you roamed in the mountain fastnesses and the woodlands no one knows, but the expectation of facing slow starvation must at times have seemed more fearsome than the terrifying death of the gas-chamber and the blast-furnace. The cry of babies unable to suck sustenance from the breasts of their starving mothers must have filled the cold night-air with a melancholy death-tune.

Wild-eyed and dishevelled you scrambled into the woodlands until the brambles had torn your clothes to tatters and the sharp stones had broken your shoes and drawn blood from your feet. You wandered about in a state of nakedness like cave-men with exhaustion and hunger reducing you to skeletons. The forests were alive with you as you swarmed through them in search of refuge.

Even the wild animals were protected from the cold by their furry covering. Even they were able to seek shelter by burrowing into the earth or by building their sleeping quarters in the trees or the caves but you were unprotected from the elements. When the icy cold winds howled through the forests and the rain fell, you hugged one another for protection but there was no warmth in you. You were slowly drying up.

In your hundreds you fell by the wayside, exhausted. In your thousands you succumbed in the forests, and you who survived moved on, sorrow adding to your already heavy burdens, until German snipers mowed you down while you were on the run. What a harrowing sight to see barefooted mothers with babies clinging to them rushing through the forest like hunted animals, panting and screaming. What a stampede in the forest! What a slaughter!

That was only one phase of your activities.

You who decided to escape from the Nazi fury through the more stereotyped channels by forged passports or bribing some Nazi official to guide you across the border, were confronted by similar savagery. You saw your children, your own children, whom you loved and cherished, torn away from you, shot by some vigilant sentry. You saw the Nazis coming at you with dogs leading them, sniffing the ground, hot on your trail. You ran and the snarling dogs scampered after you and sprang viciously upon you.

Perhaps your young beloved son was nearby you, and you asked that he be spared and the sneering Gestapo men laughed in your face and smashed your boy before your very eyes with iron rods. All this you endured. All this you saw with your own eyes.

Then there was another phase of your activities.

You who decided neither to seek refuge in the forests nor to escape by other routes, remained in your houses and waited. Every footstep you recognized. Your ears become trained to detect the slightest noise. Your eyes peered out of the window day after day. In the street below you watched men coming and going but you relied mainly on footsteps for information. There were those that belonged to your family, those that belonged to strangers, and then there were those that belonged to the Gestapo, and it often happened that you heard the footsteps of your family leaving the house but never heard the footsteps returning.

You were a prisoner in your own home. Day and night you sat and waited. You sat in the awful silence and waited for something to happen. Never before had it occurred to you that terror could reside in silence. It would sometimes happen that footsteps would suddenly stop outside your door. After that you would be travelling in a cattle truck and your family never heard of you again.

Then there was one other phase of your activities.

As you moved off in your cattle trucks to the concentration camps, to the gas-chambers, to the blast furnaces, as the cattle trucks rumbled along their way, some of you mothers, with babies held tightly to your bosoms realizing the destination to which you were travelling would fling your young beloved children out of the fast-moving trucks so that they would be spared the slow torturous death that you were destined for. This must have been one of the greatest acts of discipline and sacrifice.

Along the tracks they lay, the babies thrown out of the [illegible] cattle trucks by their own mothers. And then there were again mothers who threw their children out of windows of high buildings to save them from the more horrible fate that awaited them at the hands of the blood-thirsty Gestapo.

All this you have endured, have suffered, not centuries ago in the Dark Ages but in our own day. How beautiful was the world of yesterday and what a terrible change has come over it since. It is almost unbelievable. It is so fantastic that if it were not true it would be described as the imaginative exuberance from a mad man's twisted and distorted brain, but it all happened so recently that those who are alive to-day, who heard of it, who saw it and who knew of it, have just refused to accept it. We have preferred to forget it, to bury it deep down in our minds because the human mind is too finely balanced to contemplate terror and horror in such concentrated form.

In the history of civilization it is recorded that at times cataclysmic waves of terrorism and hatred sweep across the face of the earth, engulfing humanity. There was the French Revolution which eliminated the despotic rule of the aristocrats. There was the War of the Roses, a religious reformation. There was the Civil War in America which involved questions of ethics and heralded the end of slavery. All those were landmarks in human history, were signposts along which humanity travelled in its blind urge to gravitate towards the truth and towards enlightenment. The slaughter which [illegible] you was also a landmark in human history. You died because you fell into the hands of a people who were turning their face against human progress, who were sliding into a miasma of moral and spiritual bankruptcy.

It was only ten years ago that you walked through the valley of the shadow of death. Your mangled and broken bodies lie [illegible] in the dust of foreign lands, your ashes gone up in smoke in the [illegible] Nazi blast-furnaces. But your memory is now no more terror than a memory by night.

Down the ages your [illegible] agony and suffering will [illegible] to remind humanity of the [illegible] ery that once dominated the earth. In this way, you, the [illegible] million, will go down [illegible] martyrs who stood as [illegible] against an avalanche of [illegible] and moral disintegration.

people were chased out of factories and workshops. Shops belonging to Catholics were looted, a large hotel that was used as a convalescent home for Catholic women was set on fire and the inmates were rescued only after great difficulty. This mob, the ignorant tools of Irish landlordism, fired by their religious prejudices, and with the fear of unemployment lurking at the back of their minds, did all this to their fellow countrymen; one of the most disgraceful episodes in the whole matter was the "Times" report which tried to put the blame on the victims.

From this it can be seen that religious and racial prejudices can be easily exploited to obtain economic ends in any part of the world.

The question arising from the above deduction is: What can we do to eliminate anti-Semitism from our midst? In my view education and economic security are the only cures. Primitive antipathies and prejudices take centuries to die, and if but one generation fails to advance educationally we can drop back to the barbaric instincts roused by religious and tribal prejudices. When I say education I do not mean technical and vocational education; a person may be well equipped in this respect but if lacking in cultural education he is just as prone, or still more prone, to ... ignorant liberal; in many ways he is more dangerous.

On the economic side we meet the root causes of most of the discontent that find an outlet in anti-Semitism, anti-Catholicism or racialism. Thus we must strive to bring about a world where fear of poverty will not haunt the ordinary man, where children will be brought up to respect each other as citizens and educated to fully understand that tolerance is the hall mark of culture and love is the gospel of all religions.

ARAB URGES

during the transitory period while the Mandator's administration is being handed over to the Palestinian state, you will find that the Jewish problem and the Palestine problem have solved themselves. You will have deprived the Zionist executive of its ammunition of human bodies, and the immigration problem will be no more. The Jews now in Palestine will adapt themselves to the circumstances."

Of the statement made to the committee by Samir Pasha, one of the delegates termed it the clearest statement of the Arab case that he had heard.

Its theme was the inevitable one: That the Palestine problem was a "case of people who simply ask to live freely and peacefully in their own homeland, which they have kept for so many generations and which they are not prepared to surrender by their own free will to any stranger community aiming at invading, with all the powerful means they possess and with the support of an influential part of the civilised world."

Weizmann Does What He Can

By Gerald Frank, In The New Republic

Outside, there is the brutal glare of the Palestinian sun. Inside the room, bright lights shine down on the horseshoe table where members of the UN Special Committee on Palestine sit listening to what a long series of investigators have heard again and again. The old man retelling the story he has told to so many committees and commissions holds his large-lettered script only a few inches from his eyes.

Dr. Chaim Weizmann is nearly blind. He is old, weary with waiting and disappointment; the guiding hand of friends had to lead him step by step to his place at the table.

"This," he had told one of his friends, "will be the last time I'll appear before a committee of inquiry even if the Angel Gabriel is on it." Dr. Weizmann puts down his script. Through a blur he sees the faces of the men at the table, to him the final court, the last investigators; for these men are of the UN and Dr. Weizmann has faith in the UN, as much faith as a man can have after so much pleading, so much repeating of things already known.

"I'm old enough to utter the warning again," Dr. Weizmann says. "Time is of the essence. This situation brooks no delay. We've suffered enough. Gentlemen, end this agony! Give us time, give us a chance to turn around, give the Jewish people a chance to do what it is destined to do. . . ."

The room is silent. Outside the doors in the streets of this ancient town are men in the uniform of the nation which this tired, almost blind old man did so much to help in a time of trouble. Dr. Weizmann resumes. "Do I think this will be done without trouble?" he asks. "Oh, no, I'm not so foolish as to think that," he assures the man behind the neat, shiny little plaques reading India, Guatemala, Czechoslovakia, Uruguay — small nations which once wanted freedom and independence, too.

Nothing is done without trouble," the voice of this great Briton, who is also a great Jew, goes on. "God has chosen this small land to give many great messages to the world. May this not happen again! The world of peace for the world may again go out from this land which so sorely needs peace. The Almighty will keep His promise in His own good time, but we humans must do our imperfect best as best we can. . . ." Dr. Weizmann's face contracts as daggers of pain stab into his eyes. But he resumes his reading of the long, long story. He does what he can.

"We are earnestly prepared to submit our plan entitled 'exodus by air' which provides for the repatriation of European Jews to Palestine minus the hazards faced by water transportation as is evident from British piracy on the high seas involving the SS Exodus 1947," the wire said.

"We humbly admit our inability to implement on a large scale our exodus by air program which provides for the parachuting of Jews between the ages of 18 and 35, due to lack of personnel and funds to insure successful operation."

The wire appealed for an end to "political and party differences" in an effort to cooperate on the project.

Jacob Brown, first vice-president of the American Federation for Polish Jews, reported that during the past year 10,000 visas were obtained for Jews from Poland to France, as the result of negotiations by Dr. Joseph Tenenbaum, President of the World Federation for Polish Jews, when he conferred with the French governmental authorities last year. Brown also reported that a total of nearly $250,000 was sent to those in need of relief and rehabilitation in European countries, $178,000 of which went to Poland, and $24,000 to France.

PALESTINE TEACHERS TO INSTRUCT DP

The United Palestine Appeal announced that thirty-six teachers from Palestine recently arrived in Europe—the first of a group of 100—and are now en route to Germany where they will launch the first phase of an educational program for Jewish displaced children.

The project is being sponsored jointly by the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the Central Committee for Liberated Jews.

The preliminary work of the teachers in Germany, the announcement said, will be the establishment and supervision of elementary schools and kindergartens, the selection and supply of textbooks and the supplementary training of teachers.

Of the 100 teachers, sixty-five will go to the United States zone, five to the British zone, three to Berlin, fifteen to Austria and twelve to Italy.
